Peter

Just thinking aloud:

- why don't we get Roland to help us with a concise factual explanation of all the issues-I think we need to pull together all the good stuff we have-that can be understood by and resonate with the man in the street.we can satisfactorily deal with all the issues in this one document
- at the same time our technical people prepare the technical based report and ensure the above version is factual
- at the same time we engage lawyers to review both documents and provide us with general advice on a Royal Commission and to be with us on the journey-I suggest you and I have a yarn with Alan Millhouse from Allens for a start
- at the same time to ensure we don't fall into the trap of believing our own BS we engage one or two external respected engineers /hydrologists to peer review our work.
- at the same time we need a dedicated person to work with the grid on the grids response and to be across the other areas of enquiry by the Commission so we know where it is heading and it's likely impact on our response and timing.

We still have a significant business to run and I don't want this getting in our way- so lets resource it properly and get in front of the game.

I want you and the Board to be right across this thing and to be in a position to go on the front foot if we choose to.

Regards
Phil

Thanks Peter

Can we express the responses so that they are crystal clear to the average punter. We have discussed other measures and information that can augment this stuff

Regards
Phil

FYI – Confidential at this stage.

These have now been held pending legal advice given the announcement of the Royal Commission.

I have also added some comments from Bob Reilly that will be incorporated in the answers – we want them packaged for when they are necessary. Bob's message is that we used almost all of the flood compartment and the dam was rising at between 4.5% and 5% per hour at the time – good indicators that the operations of the dam was appropriate given the circumstances.

There will also be some amendment to the comment about agreement with BoM, not because they disagree, rather, they only talk in river levels and not flows.

Regards, Peter.

Barry.

First 4 questions are answers to Mr O'Brien.

The rest are the Australian.

Hi Peter

I suggest that we incorporate into these answers, where relevant, the flood capacity value which we actually reached i.e 191% (I think) You could also think about including the rate of increase, expressed in these terms, in the peak inflow events on Tuesday. Taken together, these two figures demonstrate that the dam was being operated appropriately, given the circumstances.

Regards

Bob
